
Glendale, CO

Glendale at Night

City of Glendale Web Site

<http://www.glendale.co.us/>

According to the United States Census Bureau, the city has a total area of 1.0 square mile. Much of the City's limited space is devoted to commercial development, including both office and residential high rises.

The Glendale Colorado community is a small community. And it is the size of the city that makes it unique. Glendale is the perfect place for young professionals to live and it shows as the median age is only 29. Just minutes from Downtown, the Tech Center, and Cherry Creek, Glendale is the perfect location to get direct access to all three without the steep prices of actually living in them.

Glendale is a changing community. Starting with Infinity Park, which has become the center-point of the city and with its Rugby stadium it has become the focus of Rugby in America hosting National and International Rugby Events, as well as the hometown Glendale Raptors.

About Lakewood

The City of Glendale is a Home Rule Municipality located in an enclave of Arapahoe County, Colorado, United States.

The population was 4,547 at the 2000 census. The entire city is surrounded on all sides by Denver. Therefore, as a municipal entity, it is also an enclave. Glendale's fire and medical services have been provided by the Denver Fire Department and Denver Paramedics through a contract by the City and County of Denver since 2005. Glendale is policed by the Glendale Police Department.

WikiPedia

